Ball bearings drawn to the magnetic breath

On their tears amidst ten thousand voices for ten thousand years

Singing the praises of ten thousand bodies unlaced and unlaid

As the ten thousand highways unfold

Their doors for the ten thousand standing on Nineveh's shores

Where the blood of a husband

Silences wars for the girl who rises to meet him

World I've overcome by my song and the blood of a Son

But ten thousand rivers run red like my veins

Where the bones of men hum like a rattling cage

For sinew to cling to for wind to remain

In ten thousand lungs for ten thousand days

I'm breathing like a choir of holes in the ground

Where the cynical have lain where the cynical go down

Like ten thousand sparrows unlocked and unwound
